Teak wood Slipper Chair

Unknown designer, teak wood slipper chair, 1960s

This chair features a refined Scandinavian design aesthetic, characterized by its clean lines, minimal silhouette, and warm natural materials. The frame is crafted from solid wood with softly tapered legs and rounded edges, giving it a light, elegant presence while maintaining structural strength. The low profile and open base create an airy feel that is typical of modern Nordic-inspired furniture.

The seat and backrest are generously upholstered, forming a compact lounge-style configuration that emphasizes comfort without excess bulk. The cushions appear thick and supportive, with subtle contours that invite relaxed seating. The upholstery showcases a textured, neutral-toned material that adds depth and softness to the otherwise simple form.

A key highlight of the piece is the use of high-end fabric from Misia Paris, whose rich texture and refined color variation elevate the chair from a minimalist object to a luxury statement piece. The fabric's tactile quality contrasts beautifully with the smooth wooden frame, balancing warmth and sophistication.
