Copper Pendant Lamp 'Langelinie'

Poul Henningsen for Louis Poulsen, pendant light model 'Langelinie', copper, Denmark, 1950s

Like a stack of copper halos caught in mid-air, this Scandinavian Modern pendant light is the 'Langelinie', designed by Poul Henningsen in 1958 and made by Louis Poulsen in Denmark in the 1950s. Concentric copper rings step down from a slim cylindrical crown, so the Danish lamp reads as architecture as much as light, a small terraced pavilion hanging over the table.
