Model LS144 Table Lamp

Carlo Nason for Mazzega, table lamp model 'LS144', opaline glass, metal, Italy, 1980s

The Model LS144 lamp was designed by Carlo Nason for Mazzega in 1969. Created during an experimental period in Italian glass lighting, the design is defined by its sculptural silhouette and the interplay between multiple layers of opaline and translucent glass. Although originally designed as a ceiling light, this example is presented and used as a table lamp, allowing the sculptural qualities of the glass composition to be appreciated from a different perspective.
