'Spiral' model LT217 Table lamp

Carlo Nason for Mazzega, table lamp, Murano glass, metal, Italy, 1960s

The Spiral table lamp model LT217, designed by Carlo Nason for Mazzega in the 1970s, is a captivating study in movement and form. A single ribbon of hand-blown Murano glass coils into a graceful spiral, diffusing light in soft, fluid patterns. The glass sculpture is elegantly housed within a minimalist, cube-shaped metal frame that provides both structure and contrast—highlighting the delicate transparency of the glass against the clean geometry of the metal.
